

Tamil place Names in Ceylon Outside The Northern And Eastern Provinces

K. Kularatnam

The Island of Ceylon lies to the south of India, between the latitudes of about 6 and 10 degrees N. and longitudes of 80 and 82 degrees E. covering an area of about 25,000sq. miles (65,000sq. Km.). The estimated population (1963) totals about 11 millions of which 3.3 millions (aprox.) are Tamil-speaking.

According to the 1953 Census, the total Tamil-speaking population was 2,370, 226, made up as follows (out of a total population of 8.1 millions):-

Ceylon Tamils	884,703
Tamils of Indian origin	974,098
Ceylon Moors	463,963
Moors of Indian Origin	47,462

The Ceylon Tamils are found mainly in their traditional homelands of the north and east, and also in the Colombo District. The Moors are found more widespread, particularly as traders in towns; but there are also pockets of Muslim settlements in the rural areas. The Tamils of Indian origin live mainly in the plantation districts of the hill country.

The Ceylon Tamils appear to have constituted a considerable portion of the population in the North, Central and North-western provinces until the recent past. Probably a good many of them have now become Sinhalese by adopting the Sinhalese language. The same can be said also of certain other coastal districts.

From remote antiquity there have been some permanent Tamil settlements in Ceylon<sup>1</sup>. This is quite natural because the sea separating Ceylon from peninsular India is only about 20 miles wide. Owing to this, their concentrations must have been along the coast, particularly in the north and northwest. The existence of flourishing Tamil King doms in Ceylon at least from the second Century B.C. (King Elara) is a historical fact, also attested by foreign travellers like Cosmos (6-C.).

Suleyman (9-C), Abu Said (10-C), Macro Polo (13-C) and Ibn. Batuta (14-C). According to the Dipavamsa and Mahawamsa, Sena and Cuttaka, Tamil Kings, ruled from Anuradhapura in the 2nd C.B.C.

History also refers to the facts that Vijaya Bahu I (A.D. 1070 – 1110) after constructing a Saivaite (Hindu) temple at Kantalai caused a Tamil inscription to be erected on the spot. at Polonnaruwa (about A.D 1109) the Tamil Velaikkara army put up a Tamil lithic record by which they agreed to be the custodians of the tooth relic of the Buddha. King Vikrama Bahu II (1116 – 1137) left behind a Tamil inscription relating to a donation he made for the lighting of a perpetual lamp in the Saivaite temple at Magala in the Kurunegala District (N.W Province). A Tamil inscription of Manabharana. The father of king Parakrama Bahu I, found in the Kurunegala District records the after the invasions and the occupation of Ceylon by the Colas, (AD 1017 – 1076), and it grew stronger with the Pandya invasions (A.D. 1310 et seq.) It is difficult to gauge the extent of Tamil blood in the Sinhalese, but there is no doubt that it is considerable. Otherwise it is difficult to explain why the Sinhalese language not only in its vocabulary but also in its structure shows the influence of Tamil so strongly and why the Sinhalese caste -system is so similar to that of south India."

On examination of the regional distribution of place names in Ceylon one comes across not only Tamil names in areas which are now Sinhala-speaking (and vice-versa), but also sometimes composite or hybrid place names which are part Sinhalese and part Tamil in composition as well as Sinhalese and Tamil place names juxtaposed within small areas.

The old place names of Ceylon are generally speaking simple and descriptive; they reflect criteria normal to early societies and are related to the concepts and outlooks of people of those times.

The majority of the place names can be listed under one or other of the following classes:-

(The official spelling of toponyms as found in the survey maps are retained.) Not having had any training in linguistics, the present writer has had to be satisfied with merely listing the toponyms on the basis of apparent similarities, and refraining from definite conclusions.

Kade: Kochikade, Mariakkade (Colombo Dt.).

From the foregoing it seems very likely that some time in the past the North, Central and North-Western Provinces as well as the conastal tracts as far south as Colombo were inhabited by Tamil-speaking people, as is amply demonstrated by archaeology and history. In addition, there have beeen also atleast small settlements elsewhere in the Island, of Tamil-speaking people. The many composite or hybrid place names and the juxta-position of Sinhala and Tamil place names indicate the peaceful co-existence of people of both language groups.
